SageView's Nashville Office Expands

IRVINE (December 16, 2016) - SageView Advisory Group, one of the nation's leading independent investment advisory firms, today announced that James Henry has joined SageView.

James joins SageView as Retirement Plan Consultant and will work from SageView's Nashville, TN office. He brings with him over 15 years of retirement plan consulting experience. "I am excited about the enhanced services I will be able to provide to my clients and the depth of investment research and resources SageView has to offer," said Henry.

James began his retirement planning career with ING Financial Advisers supporting brokers and advisors, providing education and communication plans and developing long-term client relationships. Most recently, James was a Managing Director with Sheridan Road Financial in Nashville overseeing their retirement plan operations in the Greater Tennessee region.

He spent his career at Sheridan Road Financial providing fiduciary oversight, investment advisory services, and plan design consulting for his clients. James was also accountable for business development, marketing strategies and long-term client relationship management.

Prior to starting his career in finance, James was a Specialist in the U.S. Army for three years. He continues to support fellow veterans by being on the Board of Directors with a local non-profit called Operation Stand Down Tennessee.

"We are very excited to have James join us, and we believe that his extensive background and commitment to his clients makes him a valuable addition to SageView's advisor team," said Randy Long, Founder and CEO of SageView.
