

Things to think about to make your departure from this world...

A Good—Goodbye

While none of us like to think about our own demise, your family will certainly appreciate anything that you can contribute to making your “final” plans.

You might consider pre-writing your own obituary. We like to think that our children and family know everything about us, but in reality, they usually don't. Below is a list of topics that might help you as you write the obituary for you and/or your spouse.

- 1) Full Name
- 2) Date of Birth
- 3) Place of Birth
- 4) Elementary Schools Attended
- 5) High Schools Attended or Graduated From
- 6) College, Tech Schools, Other Education
- 7) Church Membership – Baptism Information
- 8) Places You Have Lived and Dates
- 9) Married – Additional Marriages?
- 10) Armed Forces Veteran? – Branch, Rank, Serial Number, Entry Date & Place, Separation Date & Place, Do you wish to have a Veteran Service?
- 11) Father's Name
- 12) Mother's Maiden Name
- 13) Last Occupation—Other occupations through the years
- 14) Hobbies, Travels, and Interests

- 15) Choice of Funeral Home
- 16) Disposition of Remains—Burial, Crypt, Cremation
- 17) Name of Cemetery—Location, Description of Block, Lot and Space
- 18) Living Next of Kin
- 19) Preceded in Death By
- 20) Your Service Wishes—

Service at Mortuary, Church, Graveside, Other?

Marker in Place? Marker Purchased From?

Service Conducted By?

Music Wishes—Vocalist, Organist, Other Musicians

Special Scripture and Verses

Flower Preference

Clothing to Be Used Can Be Found Where?

Description of Clothing

Jewelry to Be Used, but Removed

Memorial Suggestions?

Newspapers to Contact for Obituary

Casket Bearers

Ushers

Hairdresser

Other Special Instructions

Please include a list of special friends and family that you wish to be contacted in the event of your death. Include name, address, phone number and your relationship with these contacts.

"I've lived every day like it was my last. And now that it's here, honestly, it's kind of anticlimactic."

© Mark Parisi, Permission required for use.

© Original Artist
Reproduction rights obtainable from www.CartoonStock.com

THE RESULTS OF A STUDY
RELEASED TODAY CONFIRM THAT LIVING IS THE NUMBER
ONE CAUSE OF DEATH.