Possible Debt Deal

After stumbling on weak April retail sales and a combination of disappointing earnings and weak guidance from a major retailer, stocks moved higher mid-week as the news on the debt negotiations turned more positive.

The prospect of an agreement helped to lift a cloud of uncertainty that had weighed on markets in recent weeks and sparked sufficient optimism to shake off comments by the Dallas Fed President, who indicated that economic data may not support a pause in rate hikes yet. Aiding the market's upbeat mood was a positive update on deposit growth at a troubled regional bank.

Stocks surrendered some of the week's gains on Friday following reports of an impasse on debt talks and comments by Fed Chair Powell.

Housing Mixed

Recent updates have suggested that the housing market may be staging a turnaround after a long period of contraction. Last week's data contained some fresh evidence of revival and caution that any potential recovery may remain further out.

The first positive sign was an increase in home builder sentiment that put the National Association of Home Builders Housing Market Index's confidence level at the midpoint for the first time since July 2022. An unexpected 2.2% rise in housing starts in April followed. These encouraging reports, however, were followed by a disappointing 3.4% decline in April existing home sales.^{4, 5, 6}

Taking A Side Gig? Here's How It May Affect Your Taxes

Taxpayers who work in the gig economy may benefit from having a better understanding of how their work affects their taxes.

People involved in the gig economy earn income as freelancers, independent workers, or employees. They use technology to provide goods or services, including renting out a home or spare bedroom and providing car rides.

Here are some things taxpayers should know about the gig economy and taxes:

- Money earned through this work may be taxable.
- Tax implications exist for the company providing the platform and the individual performing the services.

This income may be taxable even if the taxpayer providing the service doesn't receive a Form 1099-MISC, Form 1099-K, or Form W-2. This income may also be taxable if the activity is only part-time, side work, or if you're paid in cash.

Show Your Heart Some Love

Heart disease is the number one killer of men and women in the U.S. While age, genetics, and family history are risk factors related to heart disease, some lifestyle factors are associated with better heart health. But first, discuss any medical concerns with your healthcare provider before beginning any diet or fitness regimen. The following information is not a substitute for medical advice:

- Manage your blood pressure: Make sure to check your blood pressure regularly. Hypertension is often asymptomatic.
- Maintain a healthy weight: Being overweight or obese may increase disease risk.
- Eat well and exercise: These two activities are associated with a lower incidence of heart disease.
- Drink less alcohol and don't smoke: These habits are seen more frequently in heart disease patients.
- Sleep well and reduce stress: Lower cortisol levels may reduce your risk for heart disease.

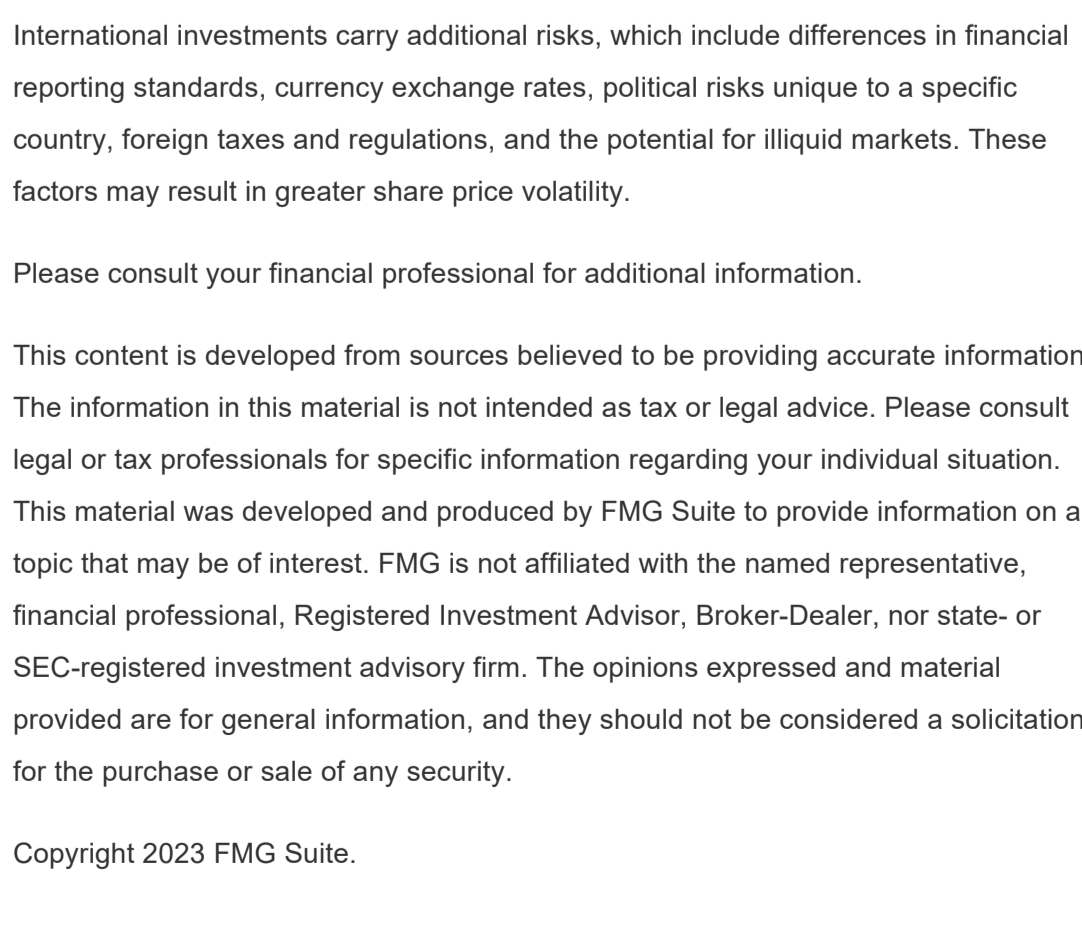

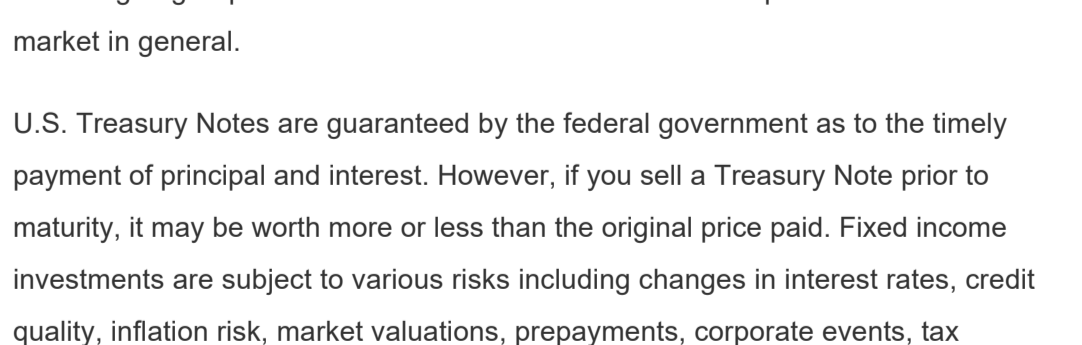

While not all risk factors are controllable, some are. The list above is not comprehensive. Give your heart some love, and talk to your doctor about the best ways to care for it.

I nearly always lie on a surface and come in different shapes and sizes, often with curves. You can put me anywhere you like, yet there is only one proper place for me. What am I?

Last week's riddle: Note this alphabetic progression: B, C, D, E, G. What letter should then follow as the sixth letter in this successive series? Answer: P, the next rhyming letter in the sequence.

S. American Saguaro, Purmamarca, Jujuy, Argentina.
