The Week on Wall Street

U.S. stock indices saw significant ups and downs last week, with traders looking for economic cues from Treasury yields and also developments in the tariff fight between the U.S. and China.

The S&P 500 lost 1.03% on the week; the Dow Jones Industrial Average and Nasdaq Composite respectively declined 1.53% and 0.79%.

Overseas shares also retreated: the MSCI EAFE index lost 2.34%.

Weekly Quote

“Human felicity is produced not so much by great pieces of good fortune that seldom happen, as by little advantages that occur every day.”

-BEN FRANKLIN

Weekly Riddle

Without fingers, I point;
without arms, I strike;
without feet, I run. What am I?

LAST WEEK'S RIDDLE: You write the word “one” on a piece of paper. An observer tells you she can make “one” disappear by adding something to it. Is this true, and how can she do it?

ANSWER: Yes. Simply by adding the letter G, “one” becomes “gone.”

ATTENTION ON THE BOND MARKET

Wednesday, the yield of the 2-year Treasury bond briefly exceeded that of the 10-year Treasury bond. When this circumstance occurs, it signals that institutional investors are less confident about the near-term economy. That view is not uniform. Asked whether the U.S. was on the verge of an economic slowdown, former Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen told Fox Business “the answer is most likely no,” noting that the economy “has enough strength” to avoid one.

The demand for bonds has definitely pushed prices for 10-year and 30-year Treasuries higher, and their yields are now lower (bond yields usually fall as bond prices rise). The 30-year Treasury yield hit a historic low last week.

SOME CHINA TARIFFS POSTPONED

Last week, the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative announced that about half the Chinese imports slated to be taxed with 10% tariffs starting September 1 would be exempt from such taxes until December 15.

The White House said that the reprieve was made with the upcoming holiday shopping season in mind, so that tariffs might have less impact on both retailers and consumers.

FINAL THOUGHT

Lower interest rates on bonds are now influencing mortgages. According to mortgage reseller Freddie Mac, the average interest rate on a conventional 30-year home loan was just 3.6% last week. That compares to 3.81% roughly a month ago (July 18).
