Welcome to the May issue of Client Insights, an e-newsletter that provides you a roundup of the most important financial services industry news.

A Camel with your Cavernet? Preview America's Most Glamourous Wine Event

A hair-raising ride with race car driver Danica Patrick, a masked ball at Versailles, a visit to a camel racetrack in Abu Dhabi, and, of course, rare Napa wines: That's a tiny taste of what's on offer at the 38th extravagant Auction Napa Valley. The purpose of the lavish, four-day, annual event is to raise as much money as possible for two dozen local charities, such as Boys & Girls Clubs of Napa Valley, St. Helena Hospital, and Ole Health. It kicks off on Thursday night, May 31, with such spectacular vintner-hosted welcome dinners as the one at Barnett Vineyards, on top of Spring Mountain. But you can start bidding remotely in the e-auction on Memorial Day weekend.

Land Rover Steers Towards Hands-Free Off-Roading With Robo-SUVs

Getting off the beaten track and navigating a rugged off-roader through sand, mud and gravel may one day be a hands-free activity. The maker of the Range Rover is working on self-driving technology capable of handling all types of terrain and weather as part of a 3.7 million-pound ($4.9 million) project, Jaguar Land Rover Automotive Plc said Wednesday. The goal is to combine acoustic sensors, cameras, radar and LiDAR technology to enable a car to assess and react to its surroundings, according to the unit of India's Tata Motors Ltd.

De Beers Has a Plan to Sell Cheap Diamonds: Grow Them in a Lab

De Beers, which almost single-handedly created the allure of diamonds as rare, expensive and the symbol of eternal love, now wants to sell you some party jewelry that is anything but. The company announced today that it will start selling man-made diamond jewelry at a fraction of the price of mined gems, marking a historic shift for the world's biggest diamond miner, which vowed for years that it wouldn't sell stones created in laboratories. The strategy is designed to undercut rival lab-diamond makers, who having been trying to make inroads into the $80 billion gem industry.

How to Get a Sneak Peak at Disney's Future Park Attractions

If crawling in and out of roller coasters and carrying a Mickey Mouse-shaped balloon all day strikes you as the opposite of a luxury vacation, well, a lot of people would agree. Hit the Walt Disney Co. parks in Anaheim on your own, and it's hard not to feel like giving up somewhere between lunchtime and Splash Mountain's 90-minute wait. But there's a much better way to conquer Mickey's kingdom—one with secret passageways to bypass queues and personal attendants to hand you ice-cold bottles of water as soon as the sunshine creeps up over Main Street, U.S.A.

This L.A. Mansion Doubled its Size and Tipled its Price in Five Years

Laurie Cohen and her husband Mark, the founder of Cohen Financial Group, knew they wanted to buy a certain 1930s mansion in Beverly Hills well before it actually came onto the market. The house—a longtime residence of actress Ann Rutherford, who died in 2012—sat on a quiet street, directly across from a golf course. “It's the best street in Beverly Hills,” Laurie Cohen says. “There's no thoroughfare and, because of the golf course, there's never going to be a neighbor who builds in front of us.”
