Earnings and economy drive market recovery in Q2

Following a turbulent First Quarter, which saw volatility spike and the first 10% correction since 2016 fueled by rising interest rate fears, the US market spent the Second Quarter in recovery mode repairing the damage and investor confidence. Despite troubling headline news like trade tariffs and geopolitical storms, the US markets grinded higher on strong corporate earnings and economic growth. It was less of a positive story overseas as foreign markets slid in Q2.

The Second Quarter was again led by growth companies, namely technology, as the Nasdaq Composite fully recovered from the Q1 set back to push to New All-Time Highs in June. Nasdaq jumped 6.3% in Q2 to finish up 8.8% at the mid-way point of 2018. However, the biggest story in Q2 was the resurgence of small-cap stocks, which have benefited from the strong US$ in reaction to rising interest rate fears. Small-caps have less currency risk than most of their multi-national large-cap counterparts who are more directly impacted by trade tariff concerns. The Russell 2000 also fully recovered from the Q1 downturn to hit New All-Time Highs in June posting a Q2 gain of 7.4% and finished up 7.0% for the year. Mid-caps also outpaced the benchmark S&P 500 in Q2 posting a gain of 3.9% and setting a New All-Time High as well, versus the solid 2.9% gain for the S&P. Mid-caps, as measured by the S&P 400, finished the first half up 2.7%, while the S&P 500 gained 1.7%. While they have recovered nicely from the Q1 setback, the benchmark S&P 500 and the Dow Jones Industrials remain below their All-Time Highs. The Dow managed to eke out a 0.7% Q2 gain but remained in negative

Small Caps provided leadership in Q2

As the US market recovered in Q2, small-caps stocks, as measured by the Russell 2000, led the charge gaining 7.4% to finish up 7.0% for the First Half of 2018. While trade tariff concerns added to volatility, small-caps shined given their low exposure to foreign trade and were better insulated from the 5.1% gain in the US dollar in Q2.

Fed upgrades economy and rate forecast

The 10-year Treasury Note yield hit a four-year high in early May; however, geopolitical concerns and tariff concerns pulled it back down. The Fed met in June and raised interest rates for the second time in 2018, upgraded its outlook on the US economy and projected a fourth rate hike for 2018. The 10-year Treasury Note ended Q2 at 2.85%.

Ask the ADVISOR

E-mail a question to Ask the Advisor:
NelsonSecurities@NelsonSecurities.com

Q I have allocations in foreign stocks funds in my 401(k) and have for years, but mostly US stocks at your recommendation. I am 34 years old and save 5% of my salary pre-tax to get my company's $0.50 match. I have noticed that the funds are volatile. Why is that and do they make sense for my 401(k)?

Stacey N., Cambridge, MA

A Congrats on taking full advantage of your company's 401(k) match. While the US is still by far the largest single country economy in the world, it is just 24.3% of the global economy, according to the World Bank (2017), and China is second at 14.8%. Foreign stocks have historically been more volatile than US stocks, and especially emerging markets. Though global economies are linked together through trade, they do move in and out of synchronization due to varying economic conditions and monetary policy. An additional element adding to volatility is the currency effect. US mutual funds are priced in US dollars, thus the strength or weakness in the US dollar will have an additional impact. For instance, last year, the weak US dollar boosted foreign mutual fund returns, and the opposite this year. While we are still recommending underweight allocations to foreign stocks, they do add an important element of diversification for long-term investors. 🐾

The Big Picture

Pro-Growth Policies Boost US Economy

The Tax Reform and Jobs Act passed in December 2017, coupled with deregulation, is having a significant impact on improving economic growth and the overall business environment in the US.

The illustration to the right shows the dramatic improvement in business Capital Expenditures since the beginning of Q2 2017, particularly in 2018. A significant part of Cap-Ex spending is on Information Technology.

US GDP is projected to grow 3%+ annualized in Q2 and US corporate earnings are expected to grow 20%+.

territory for the year at -1.8%. Strong corporate earnings fueled the recovery, though the market was tough on companies that lowered forward guidance, even if they beat Q1 earnings estimates. S&P 500 earnings grew 24.8% in Q1, according to Factset, and early estimates are 20%+ for Q2. Sector standouts in Q2 besides technology, were Energy +12.7%, Consumer Discretionary +9.4% and REITs +8.9%.

The Second Quarter brought sharp distinctions between the US and foreign markets. The synchronization of global economies was a leading theme last year and heading into 2018, with many institutions recommending overweight allocations in foreign stocks. During Q2, divergence in relative economic strength was revealed in foreign market performance as well as currency valuations. The benchmark MSCI EAFE index slipped 2.2% in Q2 and is now down 4.5% for the year. Emerging markets were hit particularly hard in Q2 falling 8.5%, as concerns about the strong US$ and trade tariffs unnerved investors. The US$ index surged 5.1% in Q2 and is now up 2.7% for the year; the US$ strength is largely attributable to the rise in expectations for higher US interest rates. The US$ index fell 10.2% in 2017 and contributed to much of the foreign market returns. While we have been increasing foreign exposure in stair steps from a very underweight position since May 2015, as relative valuations remain attractive, we remain 25% underweight our full foreign target allocation. We will continue to weigh risks and reward going forward.

Interest rates remained in the spotlight during the second quarter, whipsawed by market expectations about the Fed raising interest rates and geopolitical concerns sparking a flight to quality, as well as low foreign sovereign rates. US interest rates spiked to 2.95% for the 10-year Treasury Note in Q1, a four-year high, which sent stocks into a tailspin, as the market recalibrated its Fed expectations for a fourth rate hike in 2018. We saw interest rates continue higher in early Q2 the 10-year hit a high of 3.11%. This was an important move for the 10-year, which has failed to break through 3.00% multiple times, and the market's view on interest rates changed. It was short-lived, however, as geopolitical concerns in Italy as well as signs of slowing economic growth in the Eurozone and China spurred a flight to quality back into Treasuries by quarter-end. Despite 24.8% earnings growth and unemployment dipping to 2.8%, the 10-year settled at 2.85%. As some have noted, the US economy is outperforming our foreign counterparts by such a degree, that their underperformance is weighing our government bond yields down. US and foreign bond yield spreads are near their widest in history. And speaking of spreads, the difference between the 10-year Treasury and 2-year Treasury yields is the lowest since the summer of 2007, as are the 30- and 5-year, and the 30- and 10-year. That reflects the flat yield curve we've been witnessing. Many have discounted the current flat yield curve to historical measures due to confluence of other current factors. However, we believe it is still important to monitor as an inverted curve (short-term rates are higher than long-term rates) has been a precursor to past recessions (though not all). The Fed raised interest rates at its June FOMC meeting, for the second time this year, and upgraded its economic assessment as well as its expectations of a fourth rate hike by year end.

The Outlook

As the Second Half of 2018 begins, there are a number of reasons to remain optimistic on the markets. However, given the volatility in the first half, we are cautious as well with many moving pieces. The following are our thoughts going forward for the Second Half:

Positive Catalysts:

- Positive Individual, Small Business and Corporate effects from the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act
- Repatriation of foreign earnings continues
- Less business regulations
- Corporate earnings remain solid at 20%+ quarterly growth
- Positive fundamentals and technicals remain but some technical bear watching
- Low unemployment
- Upside catalyst from trade negotiations
- Investor and consumer confidence remain solid
- Pullbacks still seen as buying opportunities

Negative Concerns:

- Protectionist trade policy moving from negotiation tactics to global trade war
- Global economic synchronization is weakening
- Geopolitical risks, namely North Korea, Russia, Italy and United Kingdom government cohesion/Brexit transition
- Fallout from NATO summit
- Trump administration Russian investigation fallout
- Rich but not overvalued market valuations
- Stronger US dollar a headwind for US multi-national corporations
- Volatility risk
- Fed raising rates too aggressively, including its Policy normalization and potentially inverting the yield curve

We believe the positives outweigh the negatives for the Second Half of 2018 and beyond and encourage investors to remain committed to their investment programs. It is easy to get whipsawed in markets with a lot of headline news, especially when the markets react so negatively one day and just the opposite the next. The markets are still learning how to digest information in a President Trump news world. We hope you enjoy the New Look of the WAA as well as our New Website! Summer 2018

If you have any questions regarding your variable annuity, please do not hesitate to call
DAVID VOSE, Vice-President 800-345-7593 Ext. 138

E-Mail: Dvose@Nelson-Securities.com

Investor Note: Mutual fund/sub-account investment strategies, which include investing in specific sectors, foreign securities, high yield securities, or small and medium sized securities may increase the risk and volatility of the funds. Changes in interest rates may affect the performance of fixed income (bond) funds. The value of bonds have an inverse relationship with changes in interest rates; if rates increase, bond values decrease and vice versa.

The prospectus/summary prospectus contains this and other information. Please read carefully before investing. Investors should consider the investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses of the variable annuity contract before investing. To obtain a prospectus or summary prospectus containing more information for any variable annuity below, call Nelson Securities, Inc. at 1-800-345-7593.

Note: Performance and principal value will fluctuate and an investor's shares may be worth more or less when redeemed.

Model Portfolio holdings are sub-accounts we recommend you use for exposure to specific asset classes within each annuity contract.
Bench players may include past recommended sub-accounts that are worth holding, substitutes, and/or specialty sector sub-accounts.
