

Each investor is unique. In order to develop an investment portfolio that fits your needs, we provide this questionnaire with four components—your account objectives, risk tolerance, financial sophistication and investment time horizon.

No matter what type of investor you are, we offer you choices that you may select from. Each choice represents a balanced return and risk trade-off so that a portfolio can be designed for your individual situation.

It is recommended that investors establish a separate liquidity pool to meet short-term and emergency needs.

If investors have multiple investment objectives with different time horizons, consideration should be given to establishing dedicated portfolios to meet those objectives.

1. My primary account objective is:

A. Capital Preservation

My primary account objective is for my portfolio to produce a return that is at least equal to inflation. I understand that with this objective my investments will not see a significant increase in value in order to avoid the risk of volatility.

B. Income

My primary account objective is for the portfolio to generate income. While I understand that preservation of capital may not always be consistent with this objective, I specifically am not seeking long-term capital appreciation in the value of my portfolio.

C. Total Return

My primary account objective is to seek portfolio returns through the combination of current income vehicles as well as investments with a capital appreciation goal. I understand that the value of my portfolio may vary and that the value of certain investments within my portfolio may be more volatile than others.

D. Growth

My primary account objective is to seek appreciation in the value of my portfolio. I understand that both the value of individual investments within my portfolio and the value of my overall portfolio are likely to vary significantly from time to time. While certain investments within my portfolio may generate current income, income is not my primary account objective.

E. Aggressive Growth

My primary account objective is to seek the highest gains in my portfolio and I am not risk-averse in my selection of investments or investment strategies. I understand that the value of individual investments within my portfolio as a whole will likely experience significant fluctuation in value.
