Forgotten Fight

American soldiers sent to Russia to fight the decisive war against communism. It sounds like a Tom Clancy fantasy, but it actually happened.

World War I was barely over when President Woodrow Wilson decided it was time for the United States to intervene in the Russian Civil War. He sent thousands of American troops to support the White Russians, who were trying to overthrow the new communist regime under Lenin. Britain, France, and Japan sent troops as well.

This was no cold war. The Allied Expeditionary Force fought a series of bloody engagements against the Bolsheviks in North Russia, losing hundreds of men. Another American division in Siberia also took casualties.

The halfhearted efforts proved too small to prevent a communist takeover, and the troops were pulled out by 1920. Quickly forgotten in the United States, the fighting was long remembered in the Soviet Union. It cemented Soviet distrust of the West, creating suspicions that eventually helped to fuel the Cold War.

In the bitter fighting outside of Archangel, in the far north, the main means of transportation was horse-drawn sleds. Here, Colonel George E. Stewart returns from a visit to the front.

The military effort also had a propaganda component. The troops sent to Russia were accompanied by Signal Corps camera crews to bring back images of American boys going to war against communism.

The Markets

It's said markets hate uncertainty, but that wasn't the case last week.

Despite tremendous uncertainty about the outcome of the United States election, major domestic and international stock indices moved higher and the CBOE Volatility Index, better known as Wall Street's fear gauge, moved 35 percent lower. Ben Levisohn of Barron's reported:

"By all accounts, it should have been a terrible week for the stock market. At the close of trading on Friday, we still didn't know whether Joe Biden or Donald Trump had won or which party would control the Senate. There was also set to be at least two recounts - one in Georgia, and one in Michigan - with likely more to come. It's the kind of uncertainty that the market is supposed to hate."

Yet, there was little fear to be found in financial markets. Investors' confidence may have been grounded in a wave of positive economic news:

- 15 of 18 manufacturing industries grew in October. The ISM's Manufacturing Purchasing Manager's Index rose 3.9 percent in October. The Index finished at 59.3 percent, an indication manufacturing is improving and the economy is growing.
- Rates remained low. The Federal Reserve kept rates near zero, which supports economic growth. The Fed's Open Market Committee statement indicated supportive monetary policy would continue. "The Federal Reserve is committed to using its full range of tools to support the U.S. economy in this challenging time, thereby promoting its maximum employment and price stability goals."
- People are going back to work. More jobs were created in October than economists expected. The Bureau of Labor Statistic's Unemployment report showed 638,000 new jobs for October. The U-3 unemployment rate fell to 6.9 percent. That's an improvement on April's unemployment level of 14.7 percent.

While that's all good news, the number of coronavirus cases in the United States continued to increase last week. Randall Forsyth of Barron's reported, "As politics at long last fades as a factor, the renewed surge in COVID-19 cases looms large...Even without renewed mandated lockdowns, however, people are apt to hunker down voluntarily...that could dampen the labor market's recovery."

Data as of 11/6/20	1-Week	Y-T-D	1-Year	3-Year	5-Year	10-Year
Standard & Poor's 500 (Domestic Stocks)	7.3%	8.6%	14.1%	10.6%	10.8%	11.1%
Dow Jones Global ex-U.S.	7.5	-1.7	1.7	-0.1	3.7	1.6
10-year Treasury Note (Yield Only)	0.8	NA	1.8	2.3	2.3	2.6
Gold (per ounce)	3.1	27.4	30.6	15.2	12.3	3.4
Bloomberg Commodity Index	1.4	-10.0	-9.2	-6.2	-3.1	-7.2

Dow Jones Global ex-US, Gold, Bloomberg Commodity Index returns exclude reinvested dividends (gold does not pay a dividend) and the three-, five-, and 10-year returns are annualized; and the 10-year Treasury Note is simply the yield at the close of the day on each of the historical time periods.

Weekly Focus - Think About It

"There is nothing so American as our national parks...The fundamental idea behind the parks...is that the country belongs to the people, that it is in process of making for the enrichment of the lives of all of us."

--Franklin Delano Roosevelt, 32nd U.S. President
