The six stock market indices shown below are the same indices I shared in last week's RGB Perspectives. While four of the six remain range bound, two of the indices (NYSE Composite Index and BAML High-Yield Master II Index) have broken out through the top of their multi-month trading ranges to new highs during this past week (see red circled area below). If the other indices break out to new highs over the next week or so, it will provide confirmation that the trading range environment has resolved to the upside.

The breakout through the top of a trading range is generally a positive resolution to a trading range environment and increases the probability that we will see a continuation of the uptrend that started following the pandemic induced decline last year. No changes have been made to the RGB investment strategies over the last week with the RGB Core strategy fully invested and the Flex+ strategy remains in a reduced risk profile. I continue to monitor the changes in the stock market and will make adjustments to the RGB investment strategies, as appropriate.

RGB Perspectives is provided for general information purposes only. It does not constitute an offer to sell or a solicitation to buy a security, and is not an offer to provide any specific investment advice. Securities held in the RGB models are subject to change without notice. Past performance is not a guarantee of future performance. It is not possible to invest directly in an index. Individual account results will vary from RGB models due to timing of investment, amount of investment and actual securities used.
