

December 4, 2019

Equities Gain Ground Globally in November

Dear Great Lakes Wealth Clients and Friends,

Despite a steady drumbeat of headlines about impeachment, trade and the impending U.S. presidential elections, the market mood remains generally positive. There was some headline volatility to trade talks over the past few weeks, however, China announced stricter compliance to intellectual property rights (a key sticking point to structural issues with the U.S.), which has discussions moving in the right direction.

Toward the end of November, the markets were trending positively despite all the above, bringing some level of comfort to investors. Of course, these pressing issues can be expected to remain in the news, but it seems the market is pricing in progress on trade and not anticipating a jolt from impeachment or the election. Although, this could quickly change if the December 15th tariffs go into effect. We also anticipate some volatility as frontrunners emerge during the upcoming primaries and caucuses.

Monetary policy appears to be well-positioned to support economic growth, strong labor market conditions, and inflation near the Federal Reserve's 2% goal. Fed Chairman Jerome Powell implied that short-term interest rates are on hold for the time being, with the usual caveat that the central bank would cut rates again "if the outlook changes materially."

On the back of still solid domestic economic fundamentals (with muted risk of recession over the next 12 months), positive trade developments and a better-than-expected third-quarter earnings season, the S&P 500 posted its best November gain (+3.63%) since 2009 and notched 11 record highs during the month. The positive performance was a continuation of the strong gains experienced throughout 2019, as the broad-market index is up more than 25% year to date, having notched +25 record highs since January.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average (+3.72%), NASDAQ (+4.50%) and the Russell 2000 Index (+3.97%) also made positive strides during the month.

	12/31/18 Close	11/29/19 Close	Change Year to Date	% Gain/Loss Year to Date
DJIA	23,327.46	28,051.41	+4,723.95	+20.25%
NASDAQ	6,635.28	8,665.47	+2,030.19	+30.60%
S&P 500	2,506.85	3,140.98	+634.13	+25.30%
MSCI EAFE	1,719.94	1,974.47	+254.53	+14.80%
Russell 2000	1,348.56	1,624.50	+275.94	+20.46%
Bloomberg Barclays Aggregate Bond	2,046.60	2,226.55	+179.95	+8.79%

Performance reflects price returns as of market close on November 29, 2019

Here is a look at some key factors we are watching, both domestically and abroad.

Economy

- Recent economic data reports have been mixed. Consumer sentiment remains high, but business confidence is still weak.
- Consumer spending appears to be moderately strong, especially in comparison to the weak results of a year ago, supported by job gains and wage growth.
- Business fixed investment has been trending flat to somewhat lower. Soft global growth and trade tariffs remain key factors depressing business investment.

Equities

- Trade progress has at least contributed in part to improved manufacturing surveys globally over the past couple of months. Since August, interest rates have trended higher and the U.S. yield curve has steepened. This has led to rotation at the sector level from the interest-sensitive, defensive sectors toward the deep cyclical areas (i.e., banks, industrials, semiconductors).
- Technical indicators we follow are signaling that the broad-market index has been “overbought” over the short term. While the market can stay overbought for long periods (indicative of a strong market), the S&P 500 is potentially in need of a normal consolidation period to digest its recent gains before resuming higher.
- On the energy front, global coal-fired power generation is tracking to its steepest-ever decline in 2019. In the U.S., a combination of low-cost natural gas, wind and solar is resulting in coal plant retirements, predominantly for economic rather than regulatory reasons. In Europe, mandatory coal phase-out policies – in Germany, France, U.K., Italy and many smaller countries – are adding to the renewables boom. Most notably, coal is starting to lose ground in China and India, where it has historically comprised the bulk of the electricity mix, and where gas prices are above the levels of the U.S. and even Europe.

Fixed Income

- Despite some intra-month volatility, yields on 10-year Treasuries are only a few basis points higher compared to last month's close.
- Investment-grade spreads were relatively flat for the month, while high-yield spreads narrowed by 10 bps as demand for yield increased.
- Taxable municipal issuance remained strong, increasing as issuers can refinance tax-exempt issues with taxable issues as rates remain low.

International

- Besides the Greater China stock markets, which were impacted by continued political angst in Hong Kong, global markets beyond the U.S. generally experienced a positive month, despite a relatively lackluster corporate earnings season across Europe and Asia.
- Global markets seemed to be buoyed by hopes of progress among trade talks and continuing accommodative policies by many central banks around the world.
- International markets remain lightly valued compared to American alternatives and tend to offer higher dividend yields, which could present some diversification opportunities for investors.

Bottom Line

- We are beginning the seasonally strong part of the year for investing, typically from November to April.
- Temporary pullbacks offer an opportunity to selectively add to portfolios.
- As global affairs and Washington headlines persist, we will continue to monitor these current situations, including: trade negotiations, Brexit, and the impeachment proceedings.
- On average, markets outside the U.S. continue to exhibit lower earnings valuations and higher dividend yields. We'll be looking for more indications of growth potential that could further highlight opportunities for investors.
- We currently recommend clients can add to all 12 of our strategies - which one(s) is right for you? That just depends on your risk tolerance, ultimate objective, etc.
- Our current approach – Discipline and patience when both buying and selling.

As always, we'll continue to keep you updated. If you have any questions or would like more information on becoming a Great Lakes Wealth client, call us at 248.378.1200.

Sincerely,

Your Investment Team at Great Lakes Wealth

Wall Street Solutions with Main Street Values!