While there is no perfect index, we can track a variety of different indices to get a sense of how the market is performing. The indices presented here are some that I keep close eye on to monitor the trends of the market. The recent rally off the March 23 lows has been impressive but the major equity indices remain down for the year-to-date period. This remains a high-risk environment with the future of the market directly tied to economic impact of shutting down the economy (which we are only beginning to understand), the ability for the economy to reopen, and the timing of a therapy/vaccine to manage the virus.

I do not have the official numbers for April yet, but can confidently say that all the RGB Capital Group investment strategies were positive for the month. All strategies remain invested with only minor changes to the Core and Balanced Non-Qualified strategies as we increased exposure in some of the low volatility funds held in these strategies. Thank you for your continued trust and confidence during these challenging times.
