

Cover Me

"The times are tough now, just getting tougher"-- Bruce Springsteen

Following the US/China trade announcement on Thursday, stocks were for-bid, while bonds sold off. In our opinion, both sides played to a draw, providing each other with near-term political cover. But as investors are discovering, the devil will be in the details as to whether the rally sticks. We were surprised there was even an announcement, especially fresh off the heels of the USMCA deal about 24 hours earlier. However, in retrospect, we believe the USMCA "bi-partisan" accord was simply a means to provide House Democrats cover to move forward with impeachment.

The skeptic in us continues to suggest a Phase-1 deal simply resets the trade backdrop to where it was almost 24 months ago, and that selling China soybeans doesn't speak to the root cause of the problem. But even with a Phase-I trade accord, we believe tariffs will continue to be adopted as an accepted form of economic foreign policy, both here and abroad. And the ability to stop, start or escalate tariffs via a 144-character tweet, suggests to us that we are far from any comprehensive trade resolution and/or subsequent enforcement. In our opinion, China still has no impetus to make any measurable concessions before November 2020, only to potentially face a new U.S. President in less than 12 months.

Over the next 24-48 hours, Wall Street analysts will be tripping over themselves to increase earnings estimates and price targets for the S&P. However, we caution investors that a counter-intuitive outcome associated with reduced trade tensions could disproportionately help countries that have greater trade exposure with China. And together with the Conservative Party's victory in the UK (hence ushering an "all-clear" for BREXIT), may restore growth abroad, and draw investors (both fixed-income and equity alike) away from U.S. capital markets.

Disclosure: The information in this publication and references to specific securities, asset classes and financial markets are provided for illustrative purposes and do not constitute an offer to sell, or solicitation of an offer to purchase, any securities, nor does they constitute an endorsement with respect to any investment area or vehicle. This material serves to provide general information to clients and is not meant to be legal or tax advice for any particular investor, which can only be provided by qualified tax and legal counsel. Certain information contained herein is based on outside sources believed to be reliable, but its accuracy is not guaranteed. Investment products (other than deposit products) referenced in this material are not insured by the FDIC (or any other state or federal agency), are not deposits of or guaranteed by Northeast Private Client Group, and are subject to investment risk, including the loss of principal amount invested. Portfolios are subject to investment risks, including possible loss of the principal amount invested. In addition, foreign investments may be less liquid, more volatile and less subject to governmental supervision than in the United States. The values of foreign securities can be affected by changes in currency rates, application of foreign tax laws, changes in governmental administration and economic and monetary policy. Investors should consider the investment objectives, risks, charges, and expenses of ETFs carefully before investing. This and other information are contained in the fund's prospectus, which may be obtained from your investment professional. Please read it before you invest. Investments in ETFs are subject to risk, including possible loss of the principal amount invested. This information is being provided to current Northeast Private Client Group clients and should not be further distributed without Northeast Private Client Group's approval. S&P 500 Index is a market index generally considered representative of the stock market as a whole. The index focuses on the large-cap segment of the U.S. equities market. Dow Jones Industrial Average is a widely used indicator of the overall condition of the stock market, a price-weighted average of 30 actively traded blue chip stocks, primarily industrials, but also includes financial, leisure and other service-oriented firms. Russell 2000 Index measures the performance of the smallest 2,000 companies in the Russell 3000 Index of the 3,000 largest U.S. companies in terms of market capitalization. NASDAQ Composite Index is a market value-weighted index that measures all NASDAQ domestic and non-U.S. based common stocks listed on the NASDAQ stock market. Each company's security affects the index in proportion to its market value. This commentary contains forward-looking statements and projections. Actual results may differ from current expectations based on a number of factors including but not limited to changing market conditions, leverage and underlying asset performance. Northeast Private Client Group makes no representation or warranty, express or implied that this information shall be relied upon as a promise or representation regarding past or future performance. This material contains the current opinions of the author but not necessarily those of Guardian or its subsidiaries and such opinions are subject to change without notice. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results. Indices are unmanaged, and one cannot invest directly in an index. Data and rates used were indicative of market conditions as of the date shown. Opinions, estimates, forecasts, and statements of financial market trends are based on current market conditions and are subject to change without notice. Securities products and advisory services offered through Park Avenue Securities LLC (PAS), member FINRA, SIPC. OSJ: 200 Broadhollow Road Suite 405, Melville, NY 11747, 631-589-5400. PAS is an indirect, wholly-owned subsidiary of The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America® (Guardian), New York, NY. Northeast Private Client Group is not an affiliate or subsidiary of PAS or Guardian. 2019-91152 Exp.3/20.