Global Markets in Sell-off Mode

How are your investments doing?

I offer a no-obligation independent evaluation of your investments on how they are meeting your objectives and risk tolerance.

You need to manage risk in a world of volatility and uncertainty

The Importance of Our Participate Yet Protect Philosophy

A Mathematical Catch-up Game;

If the market goes down 20% you then need a gain of 25% just to break-even

Suppose you invested $100,000 in the S&P500 Index* on October 9th, 2007 just before the "Great Recession" As of March 5th, 2009, the bottom of the market decline the S&P500 Index had gone down about 56%. The value of your S&P500 investment would be only about $44,000.

To fully recover from your 56% loss, you'd need to gain 127% versus the 56% you were down.

While the current investment outlook appears quite favorable long-term, there is always a risk in the market, and we continue to recommend "participate yet protect" strategies to reduce downside risk as much as possible while still participating in potential market gains.
