

Inflation fears sent the markets lower last week as the S&P 500 fell 1.9% (+10.93% YTD)<sup>1</sup>. The Fed met last week and held interest rates stable as expected. However, dissention is starting to appear in the timing of rate hikes as St. Louis Fed president Bullard broke from the pack predicting a rate hike as early as 2022<sup>2</sup> while others, such as Minneapolis Fed President Kashkari, reiterated no increases until 2023<sup>3</sup>.

As the 2nd quarter draws to a close, we will be gearing up for a few portfolio reviews and planning updates. Spring/Summer not only offers time to relax and recharge but also some time to review and make plans for the remainder of the year. Looking at the results of the 2020 tax season and determining if adjustments should be considered for 2021. Many people are considering retirement rather than head back into work after the pandemic and reviews of plans to determine if that is feasible should precede any such decisions. Changes of careers are also on the rise as employment opportunities either arise or dissatisfaction with the "old grind" take its toll. Considering either of these? Let's talk more and determine how these changes may fit your plans. You can access my schedule at <https://go.oncehub.com/ChuckVercellone> to setup a convenient time.

Weekly Economic Update

Presented by Charles D. Vercellone, ChFC, June 21, 2021

THE WEEK ON WALL STREET

New messaging from the Federal Reserve on interest rates and inflation last week led to a broad retreat in stock prices.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped 3.45% while the Standard & Poor's 500 lost 1.91%. The Nasdaq Composite index slipped 0.28% for the week. The MSCI EAFE index, which tracks developed overseas stock markets, fell 0.64%.<sup>1,2,3</sup>

UNSETTLED MARKETS

The Federal Reserve's announcement on Wednesday that interest rate hikes may likely occur sooner than expected and that it had underestimated the pace of inflation unsettled investors. The hardest hit groups were cyclical stocks, like energy, materials, and industrials, as well as financials and consumer staples.<sup>4</sup>

Losses accelerated into the week's close on comments by St. Louis Fed President James Bullard that the first rate hike could be as soon as 2022.

The bond yield curve flattened, as short-term interest rates rose in anticipation of rising rates and longer-term rates declined, reflecting a view of an eventual economic slowdown.

THE FED'S SURPRISE

Last week's FOMC meeting announcement took investors by surprise as the Fed indicated that two rate hikes in 2023 were likely. It was as recent as March that the Fed had signaled that rates would remain unchanged until 2024.<sup>4</sup>

The Fed also raised its inflation expectations to 3.4%, up from its March projection of 2.4%, though it continues to believe that price increases will be transitory in nature.<sup>5</sup>

The Fed provided no indication of when and by how much it might begin tapering its monthly bond purchase program.<sup>6</sup>
