

As Punxsutawney Phil emerged from his sleepy den last month to proclaim six more weeks of winter, our collective thoughts (and fantasies) may turn toward spring and its bountiful offerings. But even as many Americans are stuck shoveling snow there are still great ways to “go green” this month. Thinking of making some earth-friendly lifestyle changes? I’ve included an article that will show you how transitioning to meaningful eco-friendly choices can really make a difference. And speaking of green, here are 5 easy ways to save $5,000 and keep a little more of those hard-earned dollars in your pocket. Many young adults are preparing to graduate from college and are looking for work, and this article examines some surprising elements future employers look for in successful candidates. Finally, if you’re ready to celebrate the end of winter, think about planning a spring garden. This article will help cultivate your green thumb — and a lot of delicious vegetables!
