Achieving Financial Wellness without Unnecessary Risk

What are you working for?

Summer unofficially ends this weekend with Labor Day. Although Labor Day is now more associated with fireworks, cookouts, and visits to the beach, its origins are in the workers' rights movement and it is a celebration of workers and their achievements.

Labor Day always makes me think about what I'm working for. We've all been working hard - even harder and in different ways since the beginning of the pandemic. Knowing what you are working for - your priorities and goals - can help us build a personalized financial strategy and keep you on track. Let's put your hard work to work in helping to achieve your goals.

Enjoy your long weekend, here's some informative and inspirational reading. I'd love to hear what you think - get in touch.

Thanks,

Margaret & Henry
