

Response to the stimulus and a firming bond market sent the stock market higher last week as the S&P 500 rose 2.64% (4.99% YTD)¹. The expectations of stimulus payments also sent consumer confidence higher. The University of Michigan's preliminary report came in at 83 in early March, its highest level since the start of the pandemic, while economists had expected a value of 78.9². Additionally, the New York Fed's Empire Manufacturing Index jumped to 17.4 from 12.1 in February, its highest reading in 10 years³.

Eyes at half mast today? I hope you remembered to turn your clocks ahead yesterday as Daylight Savings Time started. I think I got all the clocks in the house corrected (I usually forget the one on the thermostat but not this time). Debate started again on the benefit of springing ahead and falling back annually. I'm not sure where I fit as I do like the sunshine late in the day but it's dark again as I head to the office. I did discover I was mistaken in belief DST was something farmers requested to give them more time to plan and reap but have found it was actually started in WWI to conserve energy during fuel shortages. Well, I do like to quote "You learn something new every day, sometimes it's what you learned yesterday was wrong".

This Week's Inspiration/Activity:

Adventure is just bad planning.

Roald Amundsen (1872 - 1928)

Your activity for this week is to look over your goals and determine on which adventures you would like to embark, and which adventures should be avoided by working on your plans (i.e., retirement). Give me a call to discuss.

This Week in History –

March 15, 1972 -- The Godfather—a three-hour epic chronicling the lives of the Corleones, an Italian American crime family led by the powerful Vito Corleone (Marlon Brando)—is released in theaters⁴.

In this week's recap: The White House signs COVID-19 fiscal relief bill into law; the economy reacted positively.

Weekly Economic Update

Presented by Charles D. Vercellone, ChFC, March 15, 2021

THE WEEK ON WALL STREET

Stocks touched new record highs last week as bond yields steadied, a fiscal relief bill was signed into law, and confidence in a strong economic recovery grew.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average gained 4.07%, while the Standard & Poor's 500 tacked on 2.64%. The Nasdaq Composite index rose 3.09% for the week. The MSCI EAFE index, which tracks developed overseas stock markets, gained 3.01%.^{1,2,3}

DOW 32,000

Stocks marched higher as bond yields leveled off and the $1.9 trillion stimulus bill moved through the legislative process. A muted inflation number and a better-than-expected jobless claims report evidenced an improving economy absent an attendant rise in inflation.⁴

The technology sector was particularly volatile, with the NASDAQ Composite falling into correction territory to start the week as investors rotated into cyclical opportunities.

Technology rebounded strongly as bond yields stabilized and bargain hunters purchased tech names at reduced prices. The bounceback propelled the S&P 500 to a record high, while the reopening trade drove the Dow Industrials above 32,000 for the first time.^{5,6}

The week ended on a mixed note, with the Dow and S&P 500 adding to their record closes and the NASDAQ Composite trimming its weekly gain.

TREASURY AUCTIONS

Treasury auctions to finance federal spending are usually staid affairs, but investor trepidation was high ahead of last week's auctions of 10-year and 30-year Treasuries. Investors were concerned that lukewarm demand amid a huge supply had the potential to drive yields higher and take the pressure on stock prices lower.

As it turned out, Wednesday's auction of 10-year Notes was received with adequate demand, helped by a tame February inflation number and strong overseas interest. The following day's 30-year auction also went relatively smoothly, though the auction yield was 36.2 basis points higher than last month's auction. Despite $120 billion of federal debt issuance last week, yields steadied, easing investors' interest rate concerns for the moment.⁷

TIP OF THE WEEK

While scholarships are offered to students, no one offers a scholarship for retirement. Consider putting your own retirement before any college plans.
