

Coronavirus. We've been seeing much in the news about it and it's beginning to affect the markets. But how it's affecting the markets can be of the biggest concern. Economic indices and news continue to be positive and point to continued expansion in 2020*. Apple did take a hit last week on lowered guidance due to production issues related to Coronavirus, but Bloomberg.com notes their feeling it is a short-term decline. The issue, in my mind, is more of investor panic. Often, these types of market declines can be traced to investor (consumer) panic and not objective analysis. I admit, it can be easy to be concerned by the news, but it's important to not let emotions drive your decisions. Take some time to let the volatility die down and re-assess when the emotions are not running as high. Here is a good article discussing that issue. Still have questions or concerns? Give me a call to discuss.

----Chuck

* <https://www.marketwatch.com/story/leading-indicators-surge-in-january-point-to-steady-economic-expansion-in-early-2020-2020-02-20?mod=economic-report>

 <https://www.bloomberg.com/news/articles/2020-02-18/apple-shares-drop-after-virus-warning-rattles-tech-investors>

Coronavirus & More

The 24-Hour News Cycle moves from Impeachment to COVID-19 to the Primaries – What's next?

Provided by Charles D. Vercellone, ChFC

In recent weeks, we've seen several major stories in the news. On the political front, in addition to the arrival of the presidential election through the 2020 caucuses and primaries, we have just experienced the third presidential impeachment in American history. In international news, the latest coronavirus outbreak has hit China, now referred to as COVID-19, leading to closed borders and heightened screening at hospitals worldwide.¹

It's not so much the facts of what's going on that are unusual – none of these matters are unprecedented – but the way that they are reported in the media can be alarming. Even frightening.

How might this affect me? When major events make headlines, it's easy to put yourself in the picture. Knowing, as well, how such events might affect the financial markets, it's also easy to wonder how your investments and retirement strategy might fare.

The truth? Political ups and downs, virus outbreaks, and other circumstances might lead to some short-term volatility on Wall Street. But it's important to remember two things: 1) Your portfolio is positioned to reflect your risk tolerance, time horizon, and goals. 2) The way we experience news has changed over the years, and not all of it for the better.

Never-ending news. On June 1, 1980, businessman and broadcaster Ted Turner debuted Cable News Network (CNN), the world's first 24-hour television news channel. In the four decades since, other similar channels have emerged. Collectively, they changed how the world experiences news. Notably, it was the dawn of the 24-hour news cycle.²

Before 1980, news was very different. Major newspapers might have published several editions during a day, but most areas only had a morning or evening edition. Radio might offer news break updates at the top of the hour, with news programs in the morning, afternoon, and evening. Television followed a similar pattern.

The never-ending news cycle means that news organizations have an interest in continuing to report on the same news story even though little or nothing has changed. Twenty-four hours is a lot of time to fill, and they need ratings in order to be of value to advertisers. While this doesn't necessarily mean that the news has become inaccurate or sensationalistic, it might be perceived as repetitive.

It's also becoming ubiquitous. With our smartphones, we're often receiving news updates immediately throughout the day.

Keep informed, but don't be rattled. Your investment and retirement strategy, which you have designed and put into place with your trusted financial professional, has considered big news events, both major and minor. Your professional knows the difference between something that may be a minor force in your financial life and something that might require you to make some changes. A good strategy gives you room for market changes that might see reactions that last a few days – even a few years. Staying the course is often the smartest move, partially because you aren't reacting immediately to a dip, and you might benefit from a potential recovery.

So, keep yourself informed, but if you get too worried, have a conversation with your financial professional. They can help you understand what the news means for your financial life and offer you the context you need to remain confident in your strategy.

This material was prepared by MarketingPro, Inc., and does not necessarily represent the views of the presenting party, nor their affiliates. This information has been derived from sources believed to be accurate. Please note - investing involves risk, and past performance is no guarantee of future results. The publisher is not engaged in rendering legal, accounting or other professional services. If assistance is needed, the reader is advised to engage the services of a competent professional. This information should not be construed as investment, tax or legal advice and may not be relied on for the purpose of avoiding any Federal tax penalty. This is neither a solicitation nor recommendation to purchase or sell any investment or insurance product or service, and should not be relied upon as such. All indices are unmanaged and are not illustrative of any particular investment.

Citations.

1 - sciencemag.org/news/2020/02/bit-chaotic-christening-new-coronavirus-and-its-disease-name-create-confusion [2/12/20]

2 - history.com/this-day-in-history/cnn-launches [2020]

Charles D. Vercellone, ChFC
Wealth Strategies Group, LLC
200 E Big Beaver, Troy MI 48083
248-680-4622
chuck@wsgllc.net
www.wsgllc.net/welcome

Fee Based Advisory Services through Sigma Planning Corporation, A Registered Investment Advisor
Securities Products and Services through Sigma Financial Corporation, Member FINRA/SIPC
Wealth Strategies Group, LLC is not affiliated with Sigma Planning Corp or Sigma Financial Corp