

In this week's recap: retail sales impress again, groundbreaking suddenly tails off, stocks tread water, and more tariffs might be in store for China.

Weekly Economic Update

ANOTHER GOOD MONTH FOR RETAIL SALES

Americans are spending freely, as new Census Bureau data confirms. Retail sales advanced 0.5% last month, matching the consensus forecast of economists surveyed by Reuters, in the wake of a revised 1.3% May gain. (May was the best month for buying since last September.) The only negative note: core retail sales were flat in June. (Core sales exclude food, fuel, auto, and home improvement purchases.)<sup>1</sup>

HOUSING STARTS SINK TO A 9-MONTH LOW

Taking their biggest monthly fall since November 2016, starts unexpectedly dropped 12.3% in June. New Census Bureau data showed building permits declining 2.2% in June as well. In May, groundbreaking reached an 11-year peak.<sup>2</sup>

ARE MORE TARIFFS COMING ON CHINESE GOODS?

The possibility has just been raised. During a CNBC Squawk Box interview Friday, President Trump noted that perhaps all Chinese imports should face U.S. tariffs, explaining that he was “ready to go to 500” – a reference to the $505.5 billion total in Chinese products that came to America in 2017. The U.S. exported $129.9 billion of goods to China last year.<sup>3</sup>

A FLAT WEEK ON WALL STREET

While earnings and headlines certainly impacted market sectors, the major indices were little changed from where they began the week at Friday's closing bell. Up 0.15% across five trading days, the Dow Jones Industrial Average concluded the week at 25,058.12. Moving north but 0.02% last week, the S&P 500 reached 2,801.83. Losing 0.07% on the week, the Nasdaq Composite settled at 7,820.20, Friday.<sup>4</sup>

TIP OF THE WEEK

Are you a self-employed professional or a small business owner? You should seriously consider disability insurance. As your salary may be your household's main (or only) source of income, an extended interruption in your earnings could disrupt your lifestyle and prove financially disastrous.

THE WEEKLY RIDDLE

Scott has math 4 times a week. If he has math at 8:00 Monday, 9:00 on Tuesday and Wednesday, and 8:00 on Friday, when does he have math on Thursday?

LAST WEEK'S RIDDLE: How many times can you subtract 100 from 1,000?

ANSWER: Just once, because after that, you will be subtracting 100 from 900, 800, and so on.
