

As you enjoy that hotdog, burger or sweet treat at your favorite cookout spot this July 4th, it's a good time to think about what makes America great. One thing many of us take for granted is the many choices available to us. Sometimes I think we have too many choices, especially when it comes to shopping (gone down the cereal aisle lately anyone?). Here's a helpful article that explains when it's smart to buy online and when it's better to choose a brick and mortar store. Most people think they'll save more money buying online, but that's not always the case. Speaking of saving, a new study reveals a better way to save more money by thinking about financial goals in terms of days and not years. For most of us, it's hard to truly multitask and often it works against us. But there are creative ways to use precious time more productively. Don't curse your commute; use it to your advantage to enhance your work and home life. And because this is the most patriotic month of the year, enjoy these American-as-apple-pie movies sure to entertain you this summer.
