

The markets soared last week with the S&P having its best week since February, closing up 2.74%¹. A deal on an infrastructure bill and a key inflation number coming in as expected countered poor news on housing and jobless claims. 3 employment reports are due in this week along with Consumer Confidence poll results. However, inflation continues to weigh heavily². Fed chair Powell commented at a House hearing last week that "inflation pressures are stronger and more persistent than he had anticipated" but attributes much of the surge to pandemic re-opening issues³. Additionally, while certain sectors of the economy continue to struggle, GDP has surged the past 3 quarters after falling for the first time of 2020⁴.

Storms rolled through much of the country toward the end of last week bringing flooding and tornados, and more rain is forecast almost on a daily basis. Here in the Detroit area, freeways flooded Friday as pumps failed and many motorists needed to be rescued – flash back to some 7 years ago when similar storms rolled through. Hopefully, the forecast for the rest of this week will spare us more flooding. Sunday is Independence Day and markets will be closed on Monday in observance of the holiday. Have a safe and enjoyable weekend.

In this week's recap: Stocks reach all-time highs and the housing market showed significant improvement.

Weekly Economic Update

Presented by Charles D. Vercellone, ChFC, June 28, 2021

THE WEEK ON WALL STREET

Stocks reached new all-time highs last week as markets staged a strong rebound from the previous week's declines.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 3.44%, while the Standard & Poor's 500 picked up 2.74%. The Nasdaq Composite index increased 2.35%. The MSCI EAFE index, which tracks developed overseas stock markets, gained 0.97%.^{1,2,3}

STOCKS CLIMB

Stocks rallied on the first day of trading last week and gained further momentum on Thursday and Friday. Despite some discouraging data on housing and initial jobless claims, stocks managed to set new highs, as investors cheered an agreement between President Biden and a group of senators that appeared to pave the way for the passage of a $1 trillion infrastructure bill.⁴

Positive results from the Federal Reserve's stress tests of banks, which raised the prospect of banks raising their dividend payouts and share buybacks, and a key inflation measure coming in at market expectations provided impetus for further gains. The S&P 500 had its best week since February and ended the five-trading days at a record high.⁵

HOUSING HEADWINDS

Historically low mortgage rates, the COVID-19 pandemic, and a flush consumer have contributed to a very strong housing market in recent months. Last week's housing data for May, however, showed that housing may be running into headwinds. The rising cost of materials and labor led to a 5.9% decline in new single home sales in May even as the median price hit an all-time high.⁶ Meanwhile, sales of existing homes fell 0.9%, the fourth-straight month of declines, owing to a very low inventory. High demand, coupled with a depressed supply, led to a 23.6% increase in the median price of an existing home.⁷
